

Client Site Overview

In this unit, student teams and individuals work on a project to build a website for a client. All student teams are required to find a client for whom they can design and build a site. The client will select the topic and specify content to be included in the site. Each student team interprets the client's needs in designing navigation, the look and feel, and content flow.

The focus of this unit is working as a team to design for someone else. The main emphasis of the design-team process is upon website development, the team-client interaction for incorporating feedback and changes throughout the development of the site, and the application of techniques and skills learned in class. Students will also be required to communicate and solve problems as they arise
